

Tzurbah M'Rabbanan Institute

The Prize Committee found Rav Ben Zion Algazi's Tzurbah M'Rabbanan Institute worthy of the Katz Prize for 2021 in recognition of Rav Ben Zion Algazi and his institute's many initiatives in applying halacha in modern life. This includes its written and published works as well as the many practical initiatives founded and run by the Institute.

The Tzurbah M'Rabbanan Institute was established in 2000 with the encouragement and guidance of Rishon LeZion the, Rav Mordechai Eliyahu.

Over the years, the Institute has broken new ground in the research and teaching of halacha to thousands of students, men and women, adults and young people.

Common people, community leaders, yeshiva students, youth and children, women and midrasha girls, soldiers, prisoners and others are among those participating in its halacha classes that have spread throughout the country and the world. The study method developed and organized by the Institute, and the materials published by the Institute, promote clear and in-depth study for anyone who wants to know, understand and observe the mitzvot in daily life through its four-year structured and organized curriculum.

The Tzurbah study method strengthens and connects the family, the community, and day-to-day life to the development of halacha since Mount Sinai. It enables everyone ללמוד וללמד לשמר ולעשות ולקיים.

In the 18 years that the Institute has been under the leadership of Rav Ben Zion Algazi, it has been a trailblazer in creating a unique way of learning

The Tzurbah study method strengthens and connects the family, the community, and day-to-day life to the development of halacha since Mount Sinai. It enables everyone ללמוד וללמד לשמר ולעשות ולקיים.

In the 18 years that the Institute has been under the leadership of Rav Ben Zion Algazi, it has been a trailblazer in creating a unique way of learning and applying halacha. It has enabled every week about fifty thousand students in hundreds of frameworks in Israel and worldwide to study the halacha sources and put halacha into practice by means of its unique study materials and programs including:

Tzurbah Ba'olam - Tzurbah around the world

Tzurbah Letzi'ir'im - Tzurbah for young people

Tzurbah BaTzahal v'Sherut Beit Sohar - Tzurbah in the IDF and the prison service.

The unique teaching method developed by the head of the institute, Rav Ben Zion Algazi, introduces the learner to how halachic rulings evolved, and leads him comprehensively and thoroughly from the source, the verses in the Torah, through the Mishnayot and Gemarot, through the opinions of the Rishonim and Achronim, down to the contemporary legal rulings. The curriculum is spread out over about 300 lessons which encompass the entire Jewish life cycle in an orderly and comprehensive manner. It can be easily completed within four years of studying once a week.

For these impressive achievements in the transmission of the Torah to our generation, our Prize Committee recommends granting the 2021 Katz Prize to the Tzurbah M'Rabbanan Institute.

In consideration of all the above, the selection committee has decided to award Tzurbah M'Rabbanan Institute the Katz Prize for 2021.
