7. Linking Social Justice and Intercultural Communication in the Global Context

Globalization has catapulted people from different cultures into shared and contested physical and virtual spaces in homes, relationships, schools, neighborhoods, and workplaces, resulting in new forms of misunderstanding and conflict as well as unparalleled potential for intercultural collaboration and alliances. This workshop offers a critical, social justice approach to intercultural communication, providing theoretical frameworks and process models for developing dynamic, multicultural learning communities committed to a more just and equitable world. It is designed for faculty, trainers, and others interested in proactively linking intercultural communication and social justice in the global context. You will have the opportunity to gain knowledge, skills, and strategies to address the complexities of intercultural alliances and build capacities for social change.

Dr. Kathryn Sorrells is a professor and chair of the Department of Communication Studies at California State University, Northridge. She teaches undergraduate and graduate courses in intercultural communication, intercultural training, cultural studies, and feminist theory. Kathryn has also designed and taught classes on communication and globalization, as well as global peace and justice. She has been instrumental in developing a campus-wide initiative, Civil Discourse & Social Change, dedicated to creating a proactively engaged campus based on humanistic values, inclusivity, and social justice. Kathryn has facilitated change processes for individuals, groups, and institutions in the areas of diversity, gender, and intercultural conflict. She is also a potter and artist, and she brings her creative interests into the classroom and scholarly work. Kathryn founded and directed the Communicating Common Ground Project, an innovative community action research project that develops creative alternatives to intercultural and interethnic conflict. She is the author of Intercultural Communication: Globalization and Social Justice, co-editor of Globalizing Intercultural Communication and has published a variety of articles related to intercultural communication, gender, and social justice.
